CONTENTS, VOLUME 56, 2000

JENNIFER JORDAN BAKER
"It is uncertain where the Fates will carry me": Cotton Mather's Theology of Finance 4/1

LESLEY BRILL
Canetti and Hitchcock, Crowds and Power and North by Northwest 4/119

KRISTIN CARTER-SANBORN
Restraining Order: The Imperialist Anti-Violence of Charlotte Perkins Gilman 2/1

STEPHEN DOUGHERTY
Prophecy, Racial Paranoia, and the Figure of Egypt in Antebellum America 3/1

A. C. GOODSON
Manhattan Transfer and the Metropolitan Subject 1/89

W. C. HARRIS
Whitman's Leaves of Grass and the Problem of the One and the Many 3/29

SUSAN KALTER
"Chicamauga" as an Indian-Wars Narrative: The Relevance of Ambrose Bierce for a First-Nations-Centered Study of the Nineteenth Century 4/57

SUSAN KOLLIN
Dead Man, Dead West 3/125

JULIA LEYDA
Reading White Trash: Class, Race, and Mobility in Faulkner and Le Sueur 2/37

E. L. MCCALLUM
Hawthorne and Pynchon on the Line 2/65

WILLIAM M. MORGAN
Between Conquest and Care: Masculinity and Community in Stephen Crane's The Monster 3/63

JUSTUS NIELAND
"Enough to Make a Body Riot": Pansies and Protesters in Himes' Harlem 1/105

DONALD PEASE
C. L. R. James, Moby-Dick, and the Emergence of Transnational American Studies 3/93

MARÍA C. SÁNCHEZ
Re-Possessing Individualism in Fanny Fern's Ruth Hall 4/25

NEIL SCHMITZ
Humor's Body: Jackie Gleason, Roseanne, and Some Others 2/97

THERESA STROUTH GAUL
"The Genuine Indian Who Was Brought Upon the Stage": Edwin Forrest's Metamora and White Audiences 1/1

JOHN TAGGART
Mere Illustrations: Maurice Sendak and Melville 2/111

GORDON TAPPER
Morton Minsky Reads The Bridge: Hart Crane and the Meaning of Burlesque 4/83

ROUMIANA VELIKOVA
Troping in Zitkala-Sa's Autobiographical Writings, 1900–1921 1/49

JOHN VINCENT
Rhetorical Suspense, Sexuality, and Death in Whitman's "Calamus" Poems 1/29

JEFF WEBB
William Carlos Williams and the New World 1/65